Cloud Computing Success Stories Continue to Attract Newcomers

While most of the cloud computing chatter has been about what it is and how it works I believe what matters most is how it is being used to make a meaningful difference for businesses. So I'm going to be writing about success stories that a typical business person will understand. If you're aware of a success story that is worthy of mention please contact me via the contact form available... [\[Read more\]](#)

White House Appointee Vivek Kundra is a Cloud Computing Fan

The tech industry is abuzz about the nation's new CIO, Vivek Kundra, wanting to move the feds towards cloud computing. Imagine the discussions taking place within the brain trusts in government IT contractor's conference rooms. We're thrilled with the news! Software companies that have made sure the feds are addicted to their wares are not. Check out this site Kundra was involved... [\[Read more\]](#)

Microsoft Says to Google: Get Off of My Cloud

Last Friday Business Week reported about Microsoft plans to build up to 20 state-of-the-art data centers as it tries to keep pace with one of its chief cloud computing rivals Google. These super data centers are no small deal with an average cost per center running an estimated $1 billion. This major move to build super data centers by Microsoft are part of what they describe as the biggest... [\[Read more\]](#)
